CGIAR Annual General Meeting, Morocco, 5-9 December 2005

About 1000 international and Moroccan policymakers, agriculture and environmental scientists, and civil society will meet in Morocco during 5-9 December 2005, to strengthen and expand partnerships that stimulate economic growth in the world.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Rural Development and Fisheries of Morocco will host the fifth CGIAR Annual General Meeting. CGIAR look forward to a meeting that fosters new partnerships between CGIAR Centers, national and international scientists, civil society and the private sector.

Participants will explore how agricultural research, science and technology, and food policy initiatives can better improve the lives and livelihoods of poor people, and launch new initiatives to ensure that world class science continues to address critical global challenges while delivering real benefits to poor people.

The meeting and associated events offer excellent opportunities to interact with world-class scientists and learn how new knowledge-developed and applied within a public goods framework-is reducing poverty, hunger, and environmental degradation.
